

Carlstadt Public Schools Energy-Efficient Programmable LED Display Raises The Bar

By Millennium Visual Systems

Dated: Oct 05, 2009

The Carlstadt, NJ Public School System has seen the light! They have installed a high tech, LED programmable display in front of their newly built campus where students, parents and community residents can keep informed of the latest school news.

An ever-growing trend, LED programmable displays are the fastest way to communicate critical information to parents and students. They offer an energy-efficient and aesthetic vehicle for schools, towns, restaurants and retail businesses to exhibit real-time information. Carlstadt's Board of Education updates the sign several times a week with messages about openings, closings, upcoming events, and general communications for parents and students.

The school's Business Administrator, Stephen Imperato, said: "The entire Board of Education has expressed their feeling as to how the sign has exceeded our expectations." Mr. Imperato was enthusiastic about the high-tech additions to the campus and how Carlstadt is dedicated to raising the bar on public education.
