BOROUGH OF RIDGEFIELD CONNECTS WITH COMMUNITY WITH TWO REAL-TIME INFORMATION DISPLAYS

CHESTNUT RIDGE, NY (December 2009)- The Borough of Ridgefield enhanced their community information system this week by installing two Millennium Visual Systems' LED, programmable displays outside of their Community Center and Building Department. Mounted on each building, these displays are regularly updated with current information and also provide a constant display of the time and temperature.

With all the exciting events going on community-wide there is no better way to communicate with the public than to centralize the messages on these two displays. Eric Lenander, the Assistant to the CFO of the Borough of Ridgefield said, "These displays maintain an important transparency between our town and the community."

These displays will provide municipal announcements, recreational information, health information, and assist in emergency management. Recently, they played a critical role in notifying the community about flu-shot clinics and swine flu health precautions. These eye-catching displays are now a crucial part of the Borough's communication standard.
